

Abstract

Recently there has been an explosion of tabletop experimental proposals looking to test whether Newtonian gravity can entangle a pair of massive objects. I'll review the basic idea and give some details about a proposal of mine (joint with Holger Muller and Jacob Taylor). I'll then pivot to a more theoretical question: what would such an experiment tell us definitively about whether the graviton exists?